Water squabble threatens CV Master Plan

By STEVE HELLMAN

MONTEREY COUNTY OFFICIALS want to revise a proposed water allocation system that would cut nearly in half the number of new units projected for the next 20 years in the new Carmel Valley Master Plan.

Walter Wong, county director of environmental health, said last week that the county has "major differences" with the allocation plan being prepared under the supervision of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.

"There are several problems that have to be ironed out regarding boundaries of the plan and arbitration of disputes between the cities and the county," Wong said.

He is scheduled to meet tomorrow (Oct. 12) with the technical committee that prepared the plan.

THE PROPOSED ALLOCATION system will restrict water use and growth within the entire service area of the California-American Water Company.

The allotment of water proposed for Carmel Valley will allow not more than 1,450 new units to be built within the next 20 years. The proposed revision to the Carmel Valley Master Plan calls for 2,500 new units during that same period.

Participating in the design and implementation of the allocation plan are the cities of Carmel, Seaside, Sand City, Del Rey Oaks, Monterey and Pacific Grove. The unincorporated areas of Pebble Beach, Agujito, east of Carmel and Carmel Valley are represented by county planners.

The technical committee, comprised of representatives from these jurisdictions, presented its report at a meeting Sept. 28.

Supervisor Sam Farr objected to the allocation for the county because it would short-change the new Carmel Valley Master Plan. But city officials adamantly opposed any increase in allotments.

WONG SAID AFTER the meeting that the county would request four changes in the plan at the Oct. 12 meeting.

(1) Expansion of Cal-Am boundaries: The allocation system will encourage private water systems that will draw from the water

Chamber Chatter

By JEANELLE KAMINSKE
Secretary, Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce

ALTHOUGH THE CHAMBER of Commerce is made up of business people throughout the Valley, from the Barnyard and Carmel Rancho east to Prince's camp, its members spend very little of their time at meetings talking about commerce.

Much of our efforts are spent on service to the community to preserve and improve the unique Carmel Valley atmosphere and way of life, and we find that these efforts and hours of work for the community build good business.

CLEAN-UP DAY: The Boronda 4-H Club has scheduled Sunday, Oct. 21, for fall clean-up day when extra efforts will be made by the club to clean up trash, weeds and eyesores everywhere. Chamber members at the Lower Valley, Mid-Valley and Village are cooperating to help.

Dumpsters will be placed at key locations, and the community is invited to participate.

Let's show the 4-H kids that we have as much pride as they do in the appearance of our streets and public areas. Plan to spend a couple of hours with them, cutting weeds or picking up papers, and get to know some great future community leaders. At the end of the work-day, the Chamber will host the 4-H club for hot dogs at the Community Youth Center.

COCKTAIL PARTY: Plans are being formed for a no-host cocktail party for all Chamber members on Friday, Oct. 19, at the Foxhill Restaurant, beginning at 6:15.

John Tobias, outgoing president, will be honored with toasts of appreciation for his outstanding work during the past year and half.

The Chamber will furnish the hors d'oeuvres, and you're to furnish the camaraderie. So mark your calendar, and we'll look for you there.

INSTALLATION DINNER: New officers and Board of Directors for the coming year will be installed at this annual event on Nov. 3 at the Rancho Canada Clubhouse, starting at 6:30.

Incoming officers are: president, Peter Coakley; first vice-president, Bob Stanfield; second vice-president, Ray Teeters; recording secretary, Jeanelle Kaminske, and treasurer, Jo Lamanto.

GOOD EGG AWARDS: Highlight of the Installation Dinner is the award of "Good Eggs" to community-spirited citizens who for the past year have given of their time and talents in helping make Carmel Valley a better place to live. These "Good Eggs" are selected by former "Good Eggs" and their names are kept secret until the awards are presented.

MEMBERSHIP: If you live or work in Carmel Valley (anywhere from Hwy 1 east) and if you care about preserving the quality of life and the friendly atmosphere among us, we welcome you to join us. We are an active, growing, accomplishing group who can offer you some great membership benefits. We print a business directory annually; our Chamber group insurance program is available to members; we print and distribute beautiful color brochures of Carmel Valley; our publicity programs include ads in many west and northwest magazines, radio spots, and various publications; and we have raised funds for deserving community organizations through such projects as our past Silent Auctions. We have contributed large checks to the Hidden Valley Music Seminars, the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula, the local fire departments, the library and the Community Youth Center. Join us; there's a place for you here.

The Outlook covers
the Valley like the sun!

AFTER 22 YEARS in the same location, the Carmel Valley Library has literally run out of shelf space. Its 1,000-square-foot quarters next to the Bank of America office in Carmel Valley

Village simply can't hold enough books for the divergent interests of local residents, according to librarian Rickie Meehling. Library supporters are seeking a new building to rent with wheelchair

Need to double size:

CV Library seeks new, bigger location

THE CARMEL VALLEY Library has outgrown its present location.

The library, which has been at the same location in the Carmel Valley Village for 22 years, is in need of more space for additional books and equipment.

Members of the Friends of the Carmel Valley Library have formed a committee to search for a 2,000-square-foot building for the library.

"We simply don't have enough room," said librarian Rickie Meehling, a member of the committee along with Jacqueline Marks and Jim Webster.

"In 22 years, Carmel Valley has grown considerably, but we haven't," Meehling said.

"The interests of the residents in the Valley are now divergent and extensive. We need more books in every section; more fiction, more children's books, more car repair manuals," she said.

THE MONTEREY COUNTY FREE LIBRARY system provides the Carmel Valley Library with books through a book rotation program with other county libraries.

More books are available than the library can presently accommodate.

"Our number of volumes literally goes by the floor space," Meehling said. The library contains about 10,000 volumes.

The cramped conditions were helped a little last summer with the addition of an enclosed patio. Volunteer labor and donated materials held the remodeling cost for the enclosed reading and study area down to $12, according to Meehling.

ANOTHER ADDITION is a possibility, said Meehling, who has worked at the library for five years. But the committee is more interested in a new building.

A lot of potential space is lost in the present building because it's too narrow to place bookshelves at right angles to the walls.

Marks said, "What we need is a building with wheelchair access, a public bathroom, lots of light and about 2,000 square feet of floor space."

The library now has 1,000 square feet of floor space. Marks said that the committee would settle for 1,500 square feet.

"We want to take it in two jumps. All we want, to get started, is a square building we can wheel a wheelchair into. Then we'll get more books and more browsing room."

Several landlords in the village have already been contacted. Marks said, "We're a good tenant ... steady income."

GARDEN TALK

Observing colors in Carmel Valley

By JERRY FOOTE

IF YOU WERE ASKED to describe the basic colors of the Valley, your answer, of course, would be "green and gold." Nature has given us a restricted palette lacking in much of the brilliance and luxuriance of other parts of the country.

To newcomers it often seems a harsh and arid place, saved from being desert only by the green cover over much of the Valley. It takes some time to appreciate the subtle beauty and rich variations of the green and gold theme, but they are there, well worth any gardener's study.

To the untrained amateur without an artist's eye for color, it would seem that green is green, to paraphrase Gertrude Stein.

ONE OF MY FIRST unwitting steps in analyzing color was by watching the changing tones of green as the sun moves across the Valley. A tree or shrub with the morning sun shining through it has a very different look from that of midday, and, when the western sun casts long shadows across the Valley, the tone alters again with a great deal of blue in the green.

(This ever changing effect of light is constantly drawing me away from the housework I should be pursuing; the dust cloth hangs idle in my hand as I watch the live oak leaves being transformed. I have fashioned a very convenient theory to explain the gathering dust on the furniture: regular doses of beauty are just as necessary to the happiness of a housewife as is polished furniture, and my system of priorities places the former ahead of the latter. This automatically eliminates any stray feeling of guilt which may arise. In fact, I can now walk by the piano on my way outdoors, pause, and write with my finger in the dust, "Later!")

TO GET BACK TO the subject, my next step in observing color was to compare two hop bushes, one growing in shade and another in full sun. The shrubs are identical in every way except location, but are actually quite different in appearance. In full sun the hop bush growing in shade is much paler, the green predominating.

I began to list the many shades of green found in the Valley such as gray-green, olive-green, blue-green, chartreuse, black-green, spring green, bronze-green. Any artist would say that the spectrum of green can be analyzed completely; in fact, every student does so in his training. How often our discoveries are only steps along a well blazed trail.

WHILE READING BOOKS on color, I found more clues to what I was looking for: in studying color impressions there are four elements to consider, the intrinsic color of a leaf and its color under illumination, shadow and reflection. Reflection! That was what I had missed, for the different greens actively affect each other. In addition, reflections from water, sky, and sun are constantly interacting.

Did you know that green also varies according to the shape of the leaf and the type of surface (shiny or dull, for instance)? Or that color varies with something called "atmospheric perspective," which means that foggy or clear weather alters color tones? Another influence on color comes from the wind as it shifts the surfaces of the leaves.

AS I READ ON, I was informed that there is spectral color — what our eyes see — and there is pigment color, which is in paints.

Monet became so technical in his painting that he needed fresh canvas for each hour of the day in order to render accurately the changing light and reflections in his landscapes. Obviously this was no place for a layman; I closed the books.

Out of this exploration came a theory that it is possible to plan a Valley garden, using limited colors for the most part, and still have a varied and interesting effect.

Limited color has been tried before, as in the white garden at Sissinghurst, where nothing but silver and white blooms are allowed against the green background. Perhaps the green and gold theme with which we began should be the natural basis for a valley garden, blending with the hills, mesas, and canyons while employing everything from the palest to the deepest variations of the two colors.

IN ADDITION, BECAUSE the human eye naturally seeks the opposite color to achieve balance, some lavender and purple flowers should be added to the borders. This is basically what I have attempted, softening the effect with gray leaved plants and white flowers.

The end result has been the feel of an open garden, in harmony with its natural surroundings and enriched with compatible plants.

It has been an amateur odyssey which has no end, for the garden is constantly changing, but I would not have missed the trip for the world.

CV Master Plan threatened by squabble over water source—the Carmel River aquifer, Wong said.

While developers and homeowners located just beyond the jurisdiction lines of the plan can drill wells into the aquifer, they won't be counted in the allocation.

"From the standpoint of good planning, the boundaries of the allocation area should utilities company, serves 300 water connections in the Carmel Valley west of Robles del Rio, yet these aren't included in the allocation system.

(3) Readjustment of allocations: Annexation of unincorporated areas by the City of Carmel, for example, would alter the balance of the allocation formula, Wong said. How would the allocations be readjusted?

"Should we lose those connections off the county allocation, or should it be taken off the city's? We think it should be subtracted from the city's," Wong said.

Madelyn Sloan, a Pacific Grove City Council member, stated at the Sept. 28 meeting that her city had a Master Plan with a specific number of new units.

"We could be curtailed as well by the water supply. I'm absolutely opposed to granting a larger allotment to anyone," she said.

(4) Arbitration of allocation disputes: Disputes between the cities and the county over fair shares in the allocation system should be arbitrated by the Local Agency Formation Commission (LAFCO), according to Wong.

"LAFCO has the final say anyway. It shouldn't be the water management district," Wong said.

"We want to see the plan working," Wong emphasized. "We're going to have to implement it soon to prevent any one jurisdiction from issuing a rash of permits in anticipation of the allocations."

Buel stated at the Sept. 28 meeting that an allocation system is necessary because demand within the Cal-Am service area is going to exceed supply by 1985.

Pacific Grove Councilman Madelyn Sloan: "We could be curtailed as well by the water supply. I'm absolutely opposed to granting a layer allotment to anyone."

coincide with the area in the Master Plan," Wong said.

At the Sept. 28 meeting, Bruce Buel, manager of the water management district, argued against expansion of the Cal-Am boundary. He said it would be a "growth inducement."

Wong admitted that if more area is added to the allocation plan, then "you're committed to serve it."

(2) Look at "total picture": Wong contended that it is necessary for the water management district to look at the "total picture" of supply and demand for water, and not just that within the Cal-Am service area.

PRISON ESCAPEES HAVE VALLEY ON ALERT

There was lots of excitement here in the Valley last week, with three escaped convicts from Soledad lurking down around the Tularcitos area. For a couple of days, after one escapee was nabbed, the radio warned Valley residents to be on the lookout for the other two. And the village was swarming with patrolmen. On Friday, the other two escapees were taken into custody in South San Francisco. Police found neither the pickup stolen from Spencer Raubert nor the 30-30 rifle the three took when they burglarized the Tularcitos ranch house.

KIWANIS CLUB BACKS DRUG EDUCATION PROGRAM

The Carmel Valley Kiwanis Club will give particular emphasis to Operation Drug Alert, a community-wide drug education program.

Dr. Dean Campbell, president of the club, emphasized this aspect of the club's theme and objectives for the new year. The theme for the group will be to get involved in community service. The club will also seek to better identify with the youth of the community by helping and backing their programs and activities.

OPEN HOUSE AT MIDDLE SCHOOL

The first meeting of the Carmel Middle School Parent Faculty Club will be an open house on Tuesday evening, Oct. 21.

At 7:30 everyone will meet in the gymnasium where Mr. Orville Rogers will introduce his staff. As parents come into the gym the membership chairman will be happy to collect the $1 dues per person. The money from last year's dues purchased new uniforms for the Middle School band and these will be modeled by some of the band students on Tuesday.

Cypress Swim Club gets dunked, but Wald wins solo title

In the final rounds of the 1979 Far Western AAU Synchronized Swimming Championships at Monterey Peninsula College Pool on Sept. 30, the Cypress Swim Club took a dunking from the Huntington Beach Aquabelles in both the duet and the team events.

Kerry Wald, Carmel High School senior, managed to hang onto the slim lead she gained in the preliminaries over Huntington's Heidi Kozischek to win the solo crown. She will reign as the 1979 Far Western AAU Solo Synchronized Swimming Champion.

It was a tough battle for Wald, though, as Kozischek won the figures event with a lead of .16. Then, in the finals, both swam beautifully, both improving on the preliminary routine score, but with Wald still leading by a marginal .18 in routines.

With the figures score added to the final routine score, Wald pulled through by a scant .01 to claim the gold and the 1979 Far Western AAU Solo title for the Cypress Swim Club.

Fourth place in solos went to Cypress swimmer Susie McCleskey (Monterey), Eunice LaMica (Carmel) took seventh, and Brenda LaMica (Carmel) tenth.

The duet event was more clear-cut, with Huntington Beach ahead all the way.

Despite the loss of the duet and team events, Cypress coaches Donn Squire and Del Neel were happy with the performance of their swimmers. "I've never seen them swim better," said Squire. "I'm especially proud of Kerry Wald, who really outdid herself. Kerry gave not just 100 percent, but 101 percent every inch of the way, and no coach could ask for more of any athlete!" Both agreed that if they had to lose, it was good to lose to Huntington Beach, which is now coached by former Cypress assistant coach Carol Dentch.

Cypress placements in the compulsory figures competition were as follows: Kerry Wald, 2nd; Susie McCleskey, 4th; Eunice LaMica, 11th; Brenda LaMica, 16th; Cindy Cornford, 39th; Diana Marks, 49th; Valerie Russell, 62nd; and Lori Wright, 66th.

The Far Western Championships mark the close of the 1979 competitive season for Cypress. They are now in the process of recruiting new swimmers in preparation for the 1980 season, with tryouts for interested swimmers between the ages of 8 and 16 scheduled on Tuesday and Thursday evenings at 6 o'clock at the Carmel High School pool.

To form on-site wastewater zones:

Sanitary District/golf course pact closer

By STEVE HELLMAN

A REPORT ON THE negotiations with local golf course operators and a report recommending the formation of on-site wastewater management zones will be presented at the meeting of the board of directors of the Carmel Sanitary District on Thursday, Oct. 18.

The meeting begins at 2 p.m. in Carmel City Hall on Monte Verde Street.

According to district general manager Michael Zambory, a meeting Oct. 5 resulted in major advancements in the negotiations to implement the areawide reclamation project.

The $13.7 million project requires agreements with golf courses in the Del Monte Forest and Carmel Valley to use treated wastewater for irrigation.

Zambory said that state and county health department officials attended the "jam-packed" meeting. Operators of the golf courses were present to hear a clarification of the standards that are required for spraying treated wastewater.

RESTRICTIONS HAD BEEN spelled out in a nine-point Aug. 21 letter from Walter Wong, county director of environmental health. Wong outlined the permitted distances for spraying next to buildings, drinking fountains and property lines.

The restrictions prohibit irrigating at night, pooling or ponding on the golf courses and draining into waterways. Safeguards were also required to avoid contamination of groundwater supplies.

Several of the golf course operators balked at the restrictions, according to Zambory.

Then a recent recommendation cast doubt on negotiations with Nick Lombardo, operator of the Rancho Canada golf courses in Carmel Valley.

Prompted by state requirements, Wong issued a request to eliminate irrigation with wastewater on two-thirds of Lombardo's golf courses. The limitation stemmed from the location of three wells on the golf courses north of the Carmel River.

AN OFFICIAL OF the state Health Department attended the Oct. 5 meeting to explain Wong's recommendation. According to Zambory, "He (the official) said 100 feet from the well-heads was an acceptable distance."

"He outlined the threat that water could follow the well-casing down to the first perforations and contaminate the water. His main concern was nitrates getting into the water," Zambory explained.

But it was Zambory's contention that the nitrates would be absorbed by the plant life like a fertilizer. In any case, the sanitary district cannot afford to use only one-third of Lombardo's golf courses, Zambory said.

ZAMBORY SAID THE district still hopes to reach an agreement with Lombardo, although it would require "compromises on his part." Lombardo has already signed a letter of intention to enter into an agreement. He wants the agreement in exchange for a sewer connection that is required by the county for his proposed 175-room lodge.

The sanitary district will now attempt to secure a letter of intention from the operators of the Del Monte Forest golf courses, Zambory said.

A REPORT HAS BEEN prepared on wastewater management zones through the cooperation of the sanitary district, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District and the Local Agency Formation Committee.

Zambory said that the report contains a staff recommendation that the board of directors should provide the administration and staff for the servicing of on-site sewage disposal systems.

Directors have expressed reluctance to enter into what is basically the business of servicing new and old septic tanks. The sanitary district is under pressure from the county and the water management district to either provide the service or to allow a new sanitation district to be formed in Carmel Valley.

Newly approved developments have requested the service, including the Village Greens and Barbara Mark condominium projects.

THERE ARE OPTIONS outlined in the report, according to Zambory, that will allow the sanitary district to establish the proper mechanism for:

- Piecemeal annexations.
- Geographical area annexations.
- Annexation of the whole Valley with multiple service zones.

• Annexation of the whole Valley with a single service zone. The same options are available to the water management district or the county if either were to form a separate sanitation district, according to the report.

The specific recommendation is that the sanitary district

'Blessed are the Animals'

By Joanne Hodgen

It was truly "all creatures great and small" who assembled at St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church on Sunday, Oct. 7 for the annual Blessing of the Animals, an event that launches the local celebration of National 4-H Week.

A variety of tributes to the community and educational activities of 4-H clubs throughout the world will be observed by nearly 60 Carmel Valley 4-H members and their families through Oct. 13.

Youngsters 9 to 19 shepherded their livestock and pets as the Rev. James Brock said a prayer for all the animals. Dressed in their 4-H whites and wearing the badges of honor they earned for successful projects, the 4-H members of the Boronda and Buckeye clubs present an attractive sight at the church each year.

Though he delights in blessing the animals, the Rev. Brock was heard to remark after one service that he had "learned not to put my hand in the cages."

LATER THAT DAY, 4-H members were busy in Carmel Valley Village painting scenes of 4-H projects on store windows.

The Carmel Valley Fire Department lent a helping hand to 4-H'ers when firemen climbed their ladders to hang a banner across Carmel Valley Road in the Village proclaiming 4-H Week.

Members of the Boronda and Buckeye 4-H clubs will join forces Saturday, Oct. 13, to sell homemade baked goods in the Village to raise funds for the coming year.

Activities will wrap up on Sunday, Oct. 14, when the two Carmel Valley clubs face off in the second annual Challenge Volleyball Game at Robles Meadow in Carmel Valley, beginning at 4 p.m. This year Buckeye 4-H will defend its title and possession of a perpetual trophy.

THE BUCKEYE AND Boronda 4-H'ers are among more than four million members internationally with clubs in 75 countries in North and South America, Europe, Africa and Asia.

The University of California Agricultural Extension Service trains project leaders and provides supplies for the programs, but it is the local volunteer leaders, sponsors and parents who provide the organization with its strength.

Grey Rembert, a teen leader for Boronda 4-H and co-chairman of National 4-H Week in the Valley, says that the youth organizations and community must enrich one another. "You can't just live in a community, you have to give to a community," the 16-year-old leader insists.

Though there are nearly 20 4-H projects currently underway, Grey cites a need for more adult sponsors to head new activities.

NOW IN HER SECOND year of working with Boronda 4-H, Grey's mother, Nancy Rembert, says that she finds her work as a community leader "very rewarding. It is a chance to do something for young people and help them attain something worthwhile."

One of the many positive results of 4-H projects is that families become closer as they share a mutual goal. "4-H is a family affair," says Grey. "A child can go into a project and have the leader kindle an interest, but it is the parent who must provide support."

4-H'ers are widely recognized for their livestock projects, which include raising rabbits, sheep, goats, swine and steers. But crafts are also a viable choice for youngsters who prefer cooking, sewing, woodworking or cake decorating.

As 4-H'ers nurture and raise their animals with an ultimate goal of going on the auction block at the Monterey County Fair, they gain more than a knowledge of livestock. Through working with others, Grey says that she has gained confidence in herself.

A feeling of comradeship is also evident. Grey comments that when she works on a project with other 4-H'ers it is "all for one and one for all. When something is going wrong we point it out to help each other."

UNTIL 1973 THE Carmel Valley 4-H'ers belonged to one organization — Carmelo 4-H. That organization was divided into three separate clubs: Boronda, named for Spanish settlers in Carmel Valley who developed the recipe for Monterey Jack Cheese; Buckeye, named for the Buckeye trees in the Valley; and Carmelo, which eventually melded into Boronda. Most recently, Los Padres 4-H Club has been established for youngsters living in the Cachagua area.

Boronda membership includes residents living west of Laurel Drive; Buckeyes live east of Ford Road. But members team up for many activities, including Exhibit Day, Community Pride Day and 4-H Week. However, a friendly rivalry arises when the two clubs clash over a volleyball net at the end of 4-H Week.

ONE OF THE HIGHLIGHTS of the year for 4-H members is Exhibit Day, conducted each July to provide the 4-H'ers with an opportunity to showcase their livestock and crafts before the "real thing" at the county fair. Hundreds of well-nourished rabbits, fattened steers, and swine, sleek horses and sassy goats are displayed by their 4-H masters.

Auction Day at the Monterey County Fair is the culmination of the 4-H'ers' dedication toward grooming and nurturing their livestock. Many 4-H'ers are heartbroken as they sell their prized animals and burst into tears. But tears do have an effect on the bidders. "They bid higher," Grey says.

This year Buckeye 4-H'er Ashley Swanson's Grand Champion 4-H lamb brought $8.25 a pound after the smoke of frantic bidding cleared — it was a $7.67 jump over the regular market price of 58 cents a pound, according to Buckeye community leader Judy Parham.

APPEARANCES BEFORE auctioneers and participation in group projects contribute to the 4-H'ers sense of self-worth. Grey initially joined 4-H when she was 10 years old and new to the Valley. "I joined 4-H because it's a great way to meet other kids."

But as she reflects over her past six years in 4-H, Grey says she has gained more than friends. "I have learned leadership and responsibility."

Judy Parham sums it up: "It is very rewarding to work with young people and help them develop their values and shape their futures."

PRETTY SHEEP all in a row are proudly displayed each July by their 4-H owners at Exhibit Day in Carmel Valley.

A SPECIAL MEETING of the Carmel Valley Master Plan Study Committee was called Oct. 4 to discuss the question of 500 units proposed for Carmel Valley Ranch. Overruling previous instructions not to tamper with the density of the project, the committee voted 4-3 to require that 100 units of the development should be required to compete for approval with other projects. Pictured are members (l. to r.) Jerry Foote; Earl Moser;

Master Plan panel split on CV Ranch

By STEVE HELLMAN

THE CARMEL VALLEY Master Plan Study Committee was openly divided at a meeting Oct. 4 over the issue of whether Carmel Valley Ranch should be guaranteed 500 condominium units.

The special meeting was called to discuss the question that has been raised by opponents of the project, insisting that the 500 units shouldn't be "built into" the revised Master Plan.

The Monterey County Planning Commission was scheduled to vote Wednesday, Oct. 10 on the new Master Plan before sending it on to the Board of Supervisors for final adoption.

The quota allocation system proposed in the Master Plan calls for 2,500 new units to be built in Carmel Valley within the next 20 years. The 500 condominium units planned for Carmel Valley Ranch would consume 20 percent of the allocation.

ON A 4-3 VOTE, the committee approved a request for an amendment to the Specific Plan for Carmel Valley Ranch, that requires the final 100 units of the project to compete in the quota allocation system.

The committee action countered a long-standing instruction that it not tamper with the Specific Plan. The 13-member study committee began its work—soon after the Specific Plan was approved—with instructions to include the 500 units in the Master Plan without debate.

The Specific Plan for Carmel Valley Ranch calls for 500 condominium units, a 100-unit hotel and golf course. When approved by the supervisors late in 1976, it was the first Specific Plan in Monterey County history. A tentative map for the construction of the first 140 units was approved earlier this year.

But the four members who voted last week to change the Specific Plan said it was not their understanding that all of the 500 units were guaranteed to the extent that they should be automatically included in the Master Plan.

Committee member Earl Moser proposed the motion to require that 100 units compete under the Master Plan's allocation system. He said his motion was intended to clarify "vague language" in the Specific Plan.

AS STATED in the Specific Plan, the 200-acre reserve for which the 100 units are planned "will not be considered for development until the updated Master Plan is adopted." Moser asked that the 100 units not be considered for development until they've competed within the allocation.

At the same time, he proposed that the overall quota be lowered from 2,500 new units to 2,400 new units. Supporting the motion were Nancy Burnett, Lucy Smithson and Mary Ann Matthews (her vote was taken in proxy). The three opposing votes were from Mel Steckler, Jerry Foote and Frank Van Zander.

Moser said, "We don't like the idea that 20 percent of the overall quota will go to one development." He sought a motion to have 360 units of the project compete in the allocation, but it failed.

Foote opposed Moser's motion on the grounds that she feared it would stall adoption of the plan. She said, "I can't see changing the 2,500 new units now when it might throw the plan off target from adoption."

But committee member Nancy Burnett said: "I'm convinced we can amend the density in the Specific Plan. It's a condition, it's not a contract. The county isn't legally bound by it."

She insisted it was necessary to confront the question over the Specific Plan for Carmel Valley Ranch because the project represented such a large part of the overall quota.

Committee member Jack Van Zander said, "You can alleviate the problem by raising the quota."

Van Zander, an engineering consultant, emphasized that it wouldn't be equitable to trim units from the project without eliminating requirements at the same time.

Smithson voted for Moser's motion, saying it was necessary to find a more equitable number of units for the project under the Master Plan.

AFTER THE MEETING, Smithson explained that the study committee was formed to revise the Master Plan at the time the county was considering the Carmel Valley Ranch project. She said it was the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association which requested the revision, donating $1,000 to the county for the work to begin.

"When Carmel Valley Ranch was proposed we realized it

To bring General Plan up to date:

State likely to give more time to county

THE STATE OFFICE OF Planning and Research (OPR) was expected this week to approve the application from Monterey County for an extension of time to correct the deficiencies in its General Plan.

A final hurdle to the one-year extension was cleared last week when the county Board of Supervisors accepted the revision of a key condition in the application concerning low-income housing.

THE APPLICATION HAD been submitted to OPR in September. But it was returned with a request that the county add a more specific condition for providing low-income housing.

The condition that was presented to the supervisors Oct. 2 included a set of stringent fees for the creation of a land bank fund to establish low-income housing sites. Developers would have been required to pay to the fund $500 per building permit for residential units, $100 for each new apartment unit, and $1,000 per building permit for the erection of new industrial or commercial buildings.

John Atha, a representative of the state Office of Housing and Community Development, suggested the fees. He provided technical assistance to the county after OPR ordered the changes in the application.

Supervisor Dusan Petrovic, however, questioned whether the fees constituted illegal taxation.

THE SUPERVISORS DECIDED to eliminate the fees.

They also disposed of an additional land contribution plan that would have been required of developers in combination with the fees. Under the property plan, developers would have been mandated to set aside 15 percent of the land (inclusionary zoning) in their development for low-income housing. The 15 percent contribution could have been made in land located outside the development in another part of the county.

This "inclusionary zoning" would have been satisfied either through land contributions or in-lieu payments.

Hearing Oct. 17 on suit to block CV Ranch

A MAJOR LAWSUIT against Monterey County involving its approval of Carmel Valley Ranch is scheduled for hearing in Monterey County Superior Court on Wednesday, Oct. 17.

The lawsuit filed by Harry Holt of Carmel last June seeks to prohibit the county from approving any subdivisions until its General Plan is brought up to date. Holt's suit also asks that the county rescind its approval of the tentative subdivision map for Carmel Valley Ranch, and rescind its approval of the Specific Plan for the project.

According to Dick Damm, an official of the Local Government Unit at OPR, an extension for the General Plan will "nullify" Holt's suit. Damm said last week that an application for the extension would be approved as soon as his office reviews it.

The extension, however, will not affect allegations in Holt's suit that the county illegally approved the Carmel Valley Ranch subdivision.

Attorney Richard Rosenthal of Los Angeles, representing Holt, said that the county is still liable for approving Carmel Valley Ranch in 1976.

"It was an illegal act. The extension has no bearing on the fact that the county illegally approved the project without a proper General Plan," Rosenthal said.

He insisted that the extension will benefit Holt's case. "Instead of blocking the lawsuit, the conditions of the extension prove that the General Plan is deficient. Everything wrong with the General Plan is addressed in the application."

The so-called "Youngblood case" wouldn't prevent the court from ordering a halt to the final map approval for Carmel Valley Ranch, according to Rosenthal. He said that the judge in that case ruled that once a developer meets all the conditions of a tentative map, it is a "ministerial act" that the final map be granted.

Rosenthal said, "The Youngblood case didn't establish a tentative map as a ministerial act if it was illegally approved. It only holds if it was properly approved."

"We'll see the county in court Oct. 17," Rosenthal said.

At two previous hearings, Rosenthal failed to secure an injunction to halt all development in the county and a restraining order to prevent the issuing of grading and building permits for Carmel Valley Ranch.

He predicted that if the case fails in Monterey County Superior Court, it will be a "sure winner at the appeals level."

was time for a new Master Plan to be brought into operation," she said.

Like many other members of the committee, Smithson said it was her understanding from the start that the 500 units for Carmel Valley Ranch was a "fait accompli."

"But we found out later we could have forced the Valley Ranch to comply to standards of the new Master Plan," she said, "and compete within the allocation system."

THIS WAS BROUGHT OUT in recent weeks from records of the original meeting of the Board of Supervisors when the project was approved. Tapes of the meeting reveal that at least two supervisors insisted the Specific Plan didn't "set the project in concrete."

The preamble of the Specific Plan states that the project was not "set in concrete," and could be changed as the future dictated. This preamble was read at last week's study committee meeting by planning commission member Bill Peters.

But Peters, who chaired the meeting, warned that any action to take units away from the development would "kill the future for specific plans in this county."

He said developers would be discouraged from preparing Specific Plans if they couldn't rely on the conditions and the provisions for units that are established through the process.

Regarding the Carmel Valley Ranch, he said the issue was: The Specific Plan was approved in 1976—the Master Plan will be adopted in 1979.

"In the intervening three years, the developer has invested in the project based on the Specific Plan. Changing it now is cutting them off at the corners," he said. Peters noted that the developer had committed more than $4 million toward construction and road improvements.

He said, "There are four supervisors who believe the Specific Plan is a useful planning tool. I don't think they'll approve any change in this one."

MATTHEWS, WHO WAS not present at the meeting, said she wanted her proxy vote to support Moser's motion. She understood that final approval of the 100 units had to await completion of the Master Plan.

Matthews said she expected the committee to request that the 360 units be evaluated under the Master Plan. She said, "The supervisors said clearly that we would be able to consider the density of the Ranch when they approved it in 1976."

"I felt we should have considered it. But Peters felt we shouldn't. It was his understanding, his decision that we not tamper with the Carmel Valley Ranch."

Peters said at the meeting that a project the same size and kind as Carmel Valley Ranch could be approved under the proposed Master Plan.

Matthews disputed this, saying the Master Plan prohibition against density credit for unbuildable land alone would lower the density of the project.

ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON'S assistant coach, Jeff Young, thinks it's never too early to get a son started in football. Here his son Jason looks on seemingly concerned that his father's team lost Saturday's game against Carmel High.

ATTENTIVE SPORTS PHOTOGRAPHER, Sherry Fleagen of Carmel High, got photographed during Saturday's game against Robert Louis Stevenson's Pirates. If she looks a bit perturbed, it might be because the opposing team was called nine times for illegal procedures. She shouldn't be too annoyed though. The penalties against the Pirates helped her team win the game.

ADORABLE LITTLE pom-pom girl, Amy Allen, cheers her team on. During Saturday's game the youngster seemed to catch more attention than the Dallas Cowboy cheerleaders could have.

LEAPING Carmel High receiver Cory Bliesner misses a pass as he is flanked by Stevenson players, Van Schwartzman (46) and Mitch Patterson (7) during Saturday's game at Bardarson Field in Carmel.

AFTER SNAGGING a pass, David Crabill (16), sophomore at Robert Louis Stevenson School dodges and skirts away from Carmel High's Pat Broadrick to make a long gain. Crabill's teammate, James Baker follows defensively. But the yardage gained was of little help in Saturday's game. Carmel gained a smashing victory by beating the Pirates 34-6.

JASON HARBERT, head coach for Robert Louis Stevenson's Pirates, seems to be wringing his hands behind his back, during the game against Carmel's Padres. Harbert was long-time varsity head coach at Carmel, until this season when he assumed the duties of head football coach at RLS.

STRETCHING for a grip of Van Schwartzman (46), Carmel High's Matt Bordonaro, who played a fine game Saturday, finds himself clutching air. James Baker of Stevenson School turns to offer his teammate assistance.

State likely to give county more time on General Plan

THE SUPERVISORS OPPOSED these specific requirements for inclusionary zoning, but retained a broad policy statement to provide an overall goal of 15 percent low- and moderate-income housing county-wide.

The supervisors' specific requirement would be that the $400,000 site of an old Safeway store in Salinas owned by the county, and the $200,000 in-lieu contribution already committed by the developer of Rancho Canada Lodge in Carmel Valley be used to start the land bank fund.

Atha defended the 15 percent inclusionary zoning. He said that Monterey County has the most difficult housing shortage of any county in the state, a result of the tourist industry which drives up real estate prices.

"More than half your population can't afford housing. We're looking for the county to deal with that. It's a question of how do you get the units on the ground," he said.

Atha proposed the fees as a new but necessary provision for low-income housing. "Hopefully, the final housing element will deal with it differently. But state law requires some provision for adequate sites for low- and moderate-income housing," he said.

SUPERVISOR KENNETH BLOHM, from North County, argued that there isn't land available throughout Monterey County for low-income housing. "Every area should be responsible for its share, including Carmel. But there's no way you can have low-cost housing on high-cost ground," Blohm said.

Supervisor Sam Farr asked Atha if a subdivider building in a city could get credit for low-income units built in the county. Atha said that the trade-off was acceptable, although the state preferred that "the cities be less impacted than the county by the demand for housing."

"Whether it (the revised condition) will be satisfactory to OPR, I don't know," Deputy County Counsel Jose Ramos noted after the board approved the deletions.

BUT DAMM ASSURED: "It sounds as though they've made more than a show of good will." He referred to the dedication of $600,000 to the land bank fund from the Safeway site and the in-lieu payment from the Rancho Canada project.

"They're going to have to further develop the condition for the inclusionary zoning," he said, although this could come after the application was approved by OPR.

Damm was asked if OPR's approval of the extension was prompted in any way by Holt's lawsuit. "I haven't followed the lawsuit. But counties usually come to OPR for an extension after being sued," he said.

Once the extension is granted, he said, a judge usually agrees to weigh the matter in favor of the county.

The commitment of budget and staff by Monterey County, Damm said, was an acceptable indication that it was faithfully pursuing its update of the General Plan. An extension from OPR adds to that commitment, he said.

A MAJOR REQUIREMENT in the application denotes restrictions on the size of developments within certain designations of land use. For example: In areas where densities are not indicated by zoning, wildlife and grazing land will have a 160-acre minimum; agricultural a 40-acre minimum; rural a 10-acre minimum; rangeland a 3-to-5-acre minimum; rural residential expansion a one-acre minimum.

Other requirements:

- General Plan amendments will be accepted during the extension period only if: (a) the proposed amendment will not prejudice the General Plan update, and it is more restrictive than the present General Plan; (b) the amendment is part of the Local Coastal Program; (c) the amendment is the Carmel Valley Master Plan revision.

- In the case of development proposals for areas of internal plan inconsistency, the most restrictive plan designation will prevail.

- Because of wildland fire hazard, the developer may be required to dedicate certain areas as open space or access.

- Any proposed development with frontage on waterways, lakes or beaches shall delineate areas of access.

- The Carmel Valley Master Plan shall be completed within the framework of the existing county General Plan. Development may proceed in the Carmel Valley Master Plan area upon its adoption.

THE CONDITIONS OF the extension aren't meant to replace the General Plan. Damm said, "It's a short-term measure. When the county completes its General Plan update, they might find the housing need is smaller or larger."

- "They might find a better method for funding resources for low-income housing. They may want to emphasize areas of the county as critical needs."

- Damm said that the overall 15 percent goal for low-income housing is what the county would eventually hope to accomplish with the housing element of its General Plan.

Supervisors to decide on redwood logging

The proposed logging of 350 virgin-growth redwood trees in the Williams Creek watershed south of Carmel Valley is scheduled for review by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

A hearing on the Environmental Impact Report (EIR) that has been prepared for the Westbrook Land and Timber project is scheduled for Tuesday, Oct. 16, at 11 a.m. Comments from adjacent property owners and residents have been included in the EIR, according to Kathy Stein, county environmental planner.

The board will decide whether to certify the final draft of the EIR. A use permit hearing will be scheduled sometime in November before the planning commission, Stein said.

The logging is proposed by Hank Westbrook of Smith River. Westbrook wants to cut down 50 percent of the redwood trees on 66 acres in Williams Canyon at the end of San Carlos Road.

An estimated 1.5 million board-feet of prime redwood would be supplied from the logging operation. Revenue for Westbrook will be between $300,000-$600,000, according to the EIR. The county would receive no financial benefit from the project, Stein said.

Trucks would haul the logs out via San Carlos Road and Carmel Valley Road to a destination in Santa Cruz County. Logging would be restricted to the months between May and October.

The EIR finds the following major impacts from the proposed logging operation:

- "Erosion will occur due to skid trails and log landings.
- "Erosion will occur due to the removal of the 'over-story' vegetation. The loss of a portion of the overhead branches will increase the amount of direct rainfall on the soil.
- "Debris from logging will enter the streambed, causing localized flooding and alteration of the streambed.
- "Noise from the logging trucks will be heard by residents along San Carlos Road. The trucking will have to be limited to certain hours.
- "Traffic will conflict at the intersection of San Carlos Road and Carmel Valley Road where logging trucks will be pulling out at two to five mph into traffic flowing at 50 mph. Warning signs or flagmen will have to be provided to limit the potential hazard," according to the EIR.

Areawide reclamation project administer the service areas. This would result in a removal of the current district ban on annexations.

If the sanitary district were to initiate the new services, it would probably be approved by the new board of directors following the Nov. 6 election.

THIS NEWSPAPER POLLED the three incumbents and the lone challenger for their opinions on lifting the annexation ban and servicing the on-site disposal systems.

Board president Ken McGinnis said, "We're being pushed into it by the county. We know the problem must be addressed soon. We're the outfit best equipped to handle it."

The advantage to the sanitary district would be close control of the alignment of the work and installation, McGinnis said. "If and when the Valley is sewerred, we'll want developments to be in line," he said.

What about the inducement to growth from lifting the annexation ban? "No matter what we do, it's the Board of Supervisors that is failing to control development. They're granting the use permits," McGinnis said.

The important consideration for the district, McGinnis said, is that present users should not have to subsidize the new service areas.

Director Ted Weller opposed the zones. He said that they weren't the direct solution to the problem of sewage disposal. "We don't want these on-site sewage plants up and down the Valley. Do the job right with a sewer line," he said.

Weller noted that the 1968 sanitary district master plan calls for a trunkline. This is based on the 1964 Basin Plan, which identifies the sanitary district as the responsible agency for the sewage needs in the Valley.

"If these zones can't be done on an interim basis, I'd rather not see it done at all," he said.

DIRECTOR CHARLOTTE Hurst said, "We're in a bind with this because of time constraints. The county has been telling us for over a year that it'll be establishing a new district if we don't put up or shut up."

Hurst said that because the sanitary district is mandated by the Basin Plan to handle the Valley, it may have to run a pipeline.

"But that's an institutional decision with no innovative thinking. We need planning first, then decisions. There are a bewildering number of complexities with the zones. It's a totally new idea. It's no time for snap decisions."

THE NON-INCUMBENT candidate, Frank Bray, said: "I'm studying my head off. I've got a pile of books to read through before the election. It's hard to break into a new field."

Bray made no comment on the zones. He backed the reclamation project as "viable."

Asked about the state designation of Carmel Bay as an Area of Special Biological Significance, Bray replied: "It's a vital question. It's going to mean a lot of expense. Right now I don't understand all the ramifications."

Asked why he filed as a candidate, he said he wanted to offer his services to the people of the county to continue his years of public service as a court reporter.

"I just want to get in there and offer my services. I don't know my opponents. I'm not under the influence of anybody," he said.

'The hand that rocked the cradle should now hold the reins!'

By LUCY SMITHSON

"IF THESE ARE THE Middle Ages, I'm overdue for a knight with a white horse."

FOR SOME TIME NOW I've been quoting peppy little sayings to myself. "I'm not getting older—I'm getting better," is a favorite.

A lot of middle-aged women talk to themselves this way. Some start psyching themselves up around age 21. "I may be old but I'm not dead yet." I've been saying that for 20 years now.

Age creeps up on a person. There's no definite time when I can say I've fallen apart. But I can no longer guarantee that at any given time I'll be able to get it together. This has ruined my reputation as a swinger.

All my friends seem to be going through body crises. One was in great shape under the pressures of poverty, privation and being married to a poop. After the divorce the peace and quiet did her in. She deflated like a football that's been played 60 minutes in a pro game. What's left after you've been dropkicked through life's goal posts and scoring isn't fun anymore?

The women of my generation have reached the age of no bellybuttons. We have surgical scars instead. All our zippers aren't on our pants' some are on us.

We have taken those cute little signs out of kitchens—the ones that read "Kissin' don't last; Cookin' do." We burned that cute little sign. Because unfortunately it was true. So true.

ABOUT THE SAME TIME we realized that cooking was going to last—and last—our husbands realized they might just as well have married us for our brains. Because that's the way it works out.

But the brains we've been developing aren't what they hoped for either. Instead of learning that a woman's place is in the home serving a male we've been learning just the opposite. And some of us uppity women are downright smart-ass about it.

To avoid these confrontations, these disputes, these contradictions ... to avoid the scars of playing bumper cars in ever faster lanes ... many women turn to hobbies. They garden, they join community improvement committees, they take a lover. Me and my friends ride horses. It's all the same thing.

I put a lot of value on my horse. He has to do a lot of things for me.

University of Pennsylvania psychiatrist Aaron T. Beck says that in order to maintain a positive outlook on life, people must develop a meaningful interest. "It can be work, outside interests, hobbies, or a relationship with another person." Also the healthy person, the person who is going to keep on coping, finds other people who can help them. Dr. Beck calls these helpers "significant others."

Dr. Beck doesn't know it, but he is describing horsewomen. My horse is a "significant other." He not only supports me in my efforts, he carries me. (The things I tell him would make your hair curl but it just makes his mane stand on end.)

AA HORSE CAN DO MORE for a middle-aged woman than you might think. It's not just that he turns mountains into mole hills as we cover miles together. It's not just that he hears confessions without warning me I must repent or fry.

He is also a fantasy object. Riding a horse at my age is my last chance to think of myself as a rhinestone cowgirl ... the last chance to wear sequins on my jeans.

One of the hard parts about becoming mature and tasteful is giving up youthful trashiness. But with a horse around you can still wear "shitkicker" boots and nobody says "Boo!"

Besides keeping my sagging psyche propped up, that horse is keeping my body in tune also. He is my fitness program. What! You expect me to jog? At my level of flab the very thought of jogging makes my ankles ache.

BUT I DO JOG. I jog across the pasture with a bridle in my hand trying to catch the uncatchable horse. Furthermore, in the pasture I don't have to worry about anyone seeing my excess flesh flop up and down.

Also, pasture dirt is a grand treatment, or at least a cover up, for enlarged pores. Riding is an excellent toner for dimpled thighs. Smooth your cellulite with a saddle!

Mothers, let's mount up and ride into the middle ages. The hand that rocked the cradle should now hold the reins!

The wine connoisseur

California's Mirassou family celebrates 125 years in winemaking

By ROBERT LAWRENCE BALZER

IN THE WORLD OF WINE, there are only a relatively small number of unbroken family lines of ownership and operation reaching across a century or more.

Unquestionably the longest line leads from the 10th century to the present Robert, the Marquis de Goulaine, producing an outstanding Muscadet from his chateau vineyards in the Loire valley. There are the Rothschilds of Pauillac, of Mouton and Lafite, the baronial Ricasolis of Tuscany in Chianti, Deinhard of Coblentz and Bernkastel.

With three or more generations in California, we have Wente, Concannon, Sebastiani, Martini still in family ownership and operation. But unquestionably America's oldest family of continuous winery operation is the Mirassou dynasty, currently celebrating its 125th anniversary from the beginning year of 1854.

THERE WILL ALWAYS be some journalistic nit-picking by would-be historians. Whether it was Louis or Pierre Pellier who established a vineyard nursery in Evergreen just below San Jose in 1852, 1854 or 1856, into whose family Pierre Mirassou was married, is inconsequential. That the whole clan was of vigorous pioneering, innovative stock is still exciting and worthy of continuous reportage.

The fourth generation of the Mirassou family points with pride to Edmund A. Mirassou, who this year became the 25th person to receive the Merit Award of the American Society of Enologists and was acclaimed "Man of the Year" by Wines & Vines, the trade publication considered to be the voice of the California wine industry.

The fifth generation — Edmund's sons, Daniel, 34, Jim, 36, Peter, 39, and brother Norbert's son Steve, 38, and his brother-in-law, Don Alexander, the winemaker — has made contributions of significance and value which you can find right now in your nearby wine shop or supermarket.

SEVERAL HUNDRED PEOPLE assembled in the courtyard of the Mirassou Vineyards on a record-breaking hot, sunny morning Sept. 11 to commemorate officially those 125 years of continuous operation.

There was a congratulatory message from Gov. Jerry Brown, brief addresses by the chiefs of the state agricultural office and the Wine Institute, the customary resolutions and plaque from local supervisors and councilmen, and a rapid adjourning to the adjacent shade for luncheon.

With a well-catered luncheon, the wines of the fifth generation were poured, with toasts which noted the happy presence of both the boys and of the sixth generation, already focusing their participation in the family winery.

TO COMMEMORATE THIS anniversary, the Mirassou Vineyard has released three select bottlings, each of which was served at the luncheon, and each of which we've been privileged to taste on other prior pourings, and recommend to you for immediate purchase.

The 1972 L.D. (Late-Disgorged — 5 years on the yeasts) Monterey Champagne is dry, of pleasantly complex bouquet, long and rich in the mouth, pale golden in color. It's a brilliant aperitif wine, suitable for the most distinguished occasions, to pour with pride.

The 1978 Mirassou Monterey County Gewurztraminer has a gentle, yet insistent floral and spicy fragrance, an appropriately slight residual sweetness, and long, clean aftertaste which begs for the next swallows.

The big surprise for many veteran wine tasters is the Mirassou 1978 Monterey Chardonnay. Why? It's an artfully blended wine with none, I repeat, none of the vegetative taste or smell characteristics which are undeniably present in not only the Chardonnay wines of other Monterey County labels but other varietals as well.

This 1978 Chardonnay, which won a medal for excellence at the Los Angeles County Fair, is the successor to the 1977 Chardonnay which is equally free of the Monterey County grassy hallmark of the region. Both are excellent wines, of a kind of buttery richness and classic balance in the fully ripened grape and judicious incense of French oak aging.

REASONS FOR THE excellence of the Mirassou Chardonnay point first to the viticultural skills of fifth generation Peter Mirassou, whose San Vicente and Mission Soledad vineyards in Monterey County are as trimly neat as formal gardens. But his secret in control is the subtle handling and stressing of the vines at certain times. Field harvesting and crushing, another Mirassou innovation, assists in bringing the nectar of the grape to the fermenters at the peak moment. From there, winemaker Don Alexander takes over the subtle controls and education of the fledgling wine.

Of an open mind, all the fifth-generation clan has no objection to the importation of other grapes from other viticultural regions of California — Napa, Sonoma, Alexander Valley — to temper the varietal intensity of Monterey County must. For you and me, the bottom line is the taste of the wine, its bouquet, and price tag, for value.

You can drink this '78 Mirassou Chardonnay now, or appreciate its enriched complexity five years from now. It's the best investment in Chardonnay we've come upon for quite some time.

School board candidates to air their views in public Oct. 11 at high school

The public will have an opportunity tonight (Thursday) to meet and hear the candidates vying for the four seats on the board of education of the Carmel Unified School District in the Nov. 6 election.

The candidates' night, sponsored by the Padre Parents Club, will be at 7:30 p.m. in Room 2 at Carmel High School.

According to club member Janet Childs, each of the six candidates will have three minutes to speak. A question-and-answer period will follow.

Student Body President Arthur Strum will be the moderator.

Two candidates are seeking the two-year term of retiring board president Clayton Neill. Doyle Clayton, a former student body president at Carmel High School, is a counselor at Monterey High School. Opposing him is George Kew, a 57-year-old attorney with a background in budget management.

Trustees Elizabeth Bell and Pamela Smith decided not to seek re-election. This leaves Richard Wilsdon, a Carmel attorney, as the only incumbent in a race against three challengers for the three seats with four-year terms.

Wilsdon has been a member of the board for 12 years. He was reappointed this year to the California School Boards Association's School Finance Task Force.

The other candidates are

Ron Parravano, Ken White and Barbara Sanford.

Sanford is a veteran board observer with 21 years' experience on school district committees. Parravano, a former high school social studies teacher from Santa Monica, is a 31-year-old attorney who served as co-chairman with Sanford on the CUSD advisory committee for budget reductions this year. White is a physical education teacher at Monterey High School with 21 years' experience in education-related fields.

Another candidates' night is scheduled for Monday, Oct. 22, at Carmel Middle School.

Supervisors to hear appeal on Tantamount

An appeal of the decision to allow the reconstruction of the Tantamount Theater in Carmel Valley is scheduled for a public hearing before the Monterey County Board of Supervisors at 2 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 16.

Owner Francois Martin asked for permission to rebuild his theater after it was destroyed by fire last year. The planning commission approved a use permit for the 144-seat theater in September with the understanding that it would return to its former use.

Deputy County Counsel Jose Ramos determined that less than two-thirds of the non-conforming use was destroyed by the fire, and therefore Martin could rebuild the theater under a use permit on the residentially zoned property.

The appeal, filed on behalf of Martha Cooper Lang by Salinas attorney Nick Kraushaar, seeks to halt the rebuilding on the basis that the theater should require rezoning.

Kraushaar said in September that he will question Ramos' decision, which he insisted was wrongly based on the county assessor's valuation of the theater after the fire.

Kraushaar contends that the county should have also counted the conforming use, Martin's residence, next to the theater. Under this approach, 100 percent of the conforming use was destroyed in the fire and the theater project would require rezoning.

The theater was destroyed by an early morning fire on Oct. 6, 1978 of undisclosed origins. Martin, a puppeteer and former stage performer, had operated the theater for 20 years as a low-key showplace for old movie classics, puppet shows and occasional stage productions.
